MSBL WORLD SERIES WINDING DOWN — PLAYOFFS GET UNDERWAY TODAY WITH GAMES IN ALL DIVISIONS, PITCHING DEPTH A REAL PLUS

By Tom Prendergast

As the 2001 MSBL / MABL World Series nears the end, teams that didn't qualify for the playoffs will start packing their bags. The remaining teams will begin their quest for a championship with first round playoff games this morning. Round two will take place in the afternoon, with the teams lucky enough to get a bye, waiting to play the first round winners. In a few divisions, a third game will be played this evening. The only break that these teams get is that they play seven innings as opposed to nine. Needless to say teams with fresh arms probably have the advantage as they continue to advance. At some point player fatigue also plays a part and the smart manager will utilize his entire bench when ever possible. For any team to advance to the semi finals they need to play good, solid baseball consistently in all areas of the game and a little bit of luck doesn't

Diary of an Aging Baseball Player

By Max Utsler

October arrives, and aging baseball teams from around the world gather in the Valley of the Sun to play for the glory and the jewelry of the MSBL World Series.

They come here with the pride of representing their homeland. While the MSBL staff does an excellent job of scheduling, I would like to suggest a different organizational scheme. We've done this 30+, 40+, 50+, 60+, National, American, Federal, Continental stuff long enough.

I propose a different divisional setup--based on team nicknames.

Have all 11 of the Indians' teams play each other. The same could hold true for the nine Giants, Yankees, Dodgers, Braves and Cardinals. Put the three Expos, two Twins, and the one Devil Rays in the Contraction Division. Put the two Astros, two Padres, and single teams from the Royals, Tigers, and White Sox in the Who Cares Division.

In the Friends of the Zoo Division we could place the San Diego Jackalopes, Pacific Coast Condors, Chicago North Panthers, Inland NW Vipers and Chicago Gators. (I grew up near Chicago. Trust me, Gators couldn't survive in the Chicago River). One question--should the Lake Arrowhead Roadkill be placed in this division?

In the Traditions Division we could nominate the Sacramento Solons, San Francisco Seals, Kansas City Monarchs and Denver Bears. All four of those teams actually existed at one time.

We also have enough teams to create the American Meteorological Society (AMS) Division. The Rhode Island Hurricanes, Central Coast Waves, Indianapolis Cyclones, Imperial Valley Heat and a pair of Storms--Denver and Louisiana could make up the Northern Conference. The South Conference would find the St. Thomas Tropical Waves, the St. Thomas Tradewinds, The St. Thomas Waves, the St. Thomas Hurricanes, St. Thomas Windstorm. (Looks like St. Thomas was starting to run out of names, but I admire their thematic consistency).

Moving on, we find the Forgot Which Sport I Was Playing Division. We'll put the Colorado Coyotes, the Des Moines Bruins, and Seattle Blues in the NHL Conference. The Minnesota Stars and Canadians (properly spelled Canadiens) should also get consideration for this conference. A shortage of teams forces us to combine the NFL Conference with the NBA Conference. The Sacramento Magic and Sun Valley Suns (redundant) comprise one part. The Fresno Saints, Des Moines Vikings, and Puget Sound Chiefs (are you sure you want that name?) are the anchors of the other part. We'll have to wait another season to allow the San Antonio Texans into the division.

You'll love this lineup in the Heavy Attitude Division. The Chicago Rebels, Tinsel Town Terror, Regina Ghosts, San Antonio Bandits, Oregon Outlaws, and Indy Demons have secured spots here. We must investigate reports of run-shaving before allowing the Houston, Denver and Long Island Black Sox to play.

We're sorry to report the cancellation of the Rock & Roll Division. Only the Chicago West Top-40 and the U.S. Coasters showed up to play.

The Name Obviously Connected to the City Division includes the Washington Bureaucrats, Chicago Fire, Hollywood Stars, Taos Solar Sox, Alaska Prospectors, Eugene Evergreens, New Mexico Bisons. We have a tie for the best name in this division between the South Dakota Rushmores and the So Cal Zens. The Michigan Wolverines and New Mexico Lobos should play each other in basketball.

We have several nominees for the HUH? Division. To qualify for this division, the team nickname must make me go HUH?, but not inspire me enough to find out why. This division includes the Omaha Chico's (do we need a possessive?), the Connecticut Bristol, The Yard Denver, Grand Rapids Zzanos, Sacramento Race Ways, L. A. Dogmellon, Alberta Car Stars, and Chicago Pater Filius. (I took Latin for two years and don't have the foggiest remembrance of that phrase. Of course, all I remember from that two years of Latin is "Et Tu Brute," which was the Roman Empire rhetorical equivalent of "If you don't slide into second, next time I'll bury the baseball in your melon").

If you have any other ideas for organizing these new divisions, please contact Tom Prendergast. He ALWAYS loves to hear from you. Call 602-555-1212.
