The MSBL WS takes another step in the right direction this Friday with the playing of the 65+ Exhibition game at Tempe Diablo Stadium. The game will start at 5:00p (after all of the 58+ playoff games are over). Any and all players age 65 and over are invited and encouraged to participate.

No need to sign up ahead of time, just bring your glove and bat. Just like a sandlot game, we'll pick the team once all of the players arrive.

Bubble Teams Face A Must Win Situation As Playoffs Really Start Today By Frank N. Stein

Forget about the pressure of a game seven, how about needing one more win just to get into the playoffs? That's what several teams in all divisions are facing today. "Win and hope the other guy loses," said Kansas City Royals manager John Brown, whose team is 3-2 and in the 48+ Federal Division. Brown is not alone as most other managers are realistic about their chances. 38+ Central skipper Scott Zavelo knows his team's chances at landing a playoff spot are slim, yet he remains positive about his club's situation. "Yeah, we know it's a long shot (about 100-1 odds) but I wouldn't bet against this team", says Zavelo with a grin on his face. And he's not alone.

Despite aching bodies, sore arms and tired legs, almost every player participating in the tournament wants to keep playing for as long as they can no matter what the odds. Teams that are lucky enough to advance will begin the playoffs on Friday, November 1.

Diary of an Aging Baseball Player

Take Signs, Batting Gloves and Cell Phones:

These are a Few of My Favorite Things By Max "Igor" Utsler

I have been saving these rants for more than a year. Please indulge me while I point out some disturbing trends in our favorite past time.

Take Signs—Pardon me, I think I have misplaced mine. Perhaps the sign itself is too complicated. Maybe we should just change to an audible. Something like, "Hey, you idiot. It's the bottom of the 9th. We're down seven. If you swing at the first strike, I will come down the line and wrap a tube sock around your neck."

But I guess we are just taking our cue from our big brothers in Major League Baseball. World Series 2002. Game 5. Giants down two going into the ninth. Due up: Aurillia, Kent and Bonds. I don't think you have to a genius to figure out the strategy on this one. Have Rich or Jeff get on, then have Barry blast one where they will have to call Mission Control to track it. So here's how it really goes. Aurillia swings at a 1-0 pitch and softly grounds out. Kent swings at the first pitch and fouls out. Bonds comes up, launches one and instead of Houston, it's "San Francisco, we have a problem." Giants lose by one.

I attend approximately 30 MLB games a year. Rarely does a game go by where I don't see some .220 hitter, batting 8th in the lineup, swinging from his heels, on a first pitch, when (you guessed it), the Royals trail by a half dozen.

Working the count. Tiring the pitcher. Maybe the archeologists of the 25th Century will be able to dig up a few artifacts of that part of the game—at least a part of the game in 1966.

Batting Gloves—Whose idea was this? Of course, claiming credit for inventing batting gloves, as Bob Costas would say, "Would be like claiming credit for inventing the leisure suit." Of all of the technological advances of baseball in the past 50 years, batting gloves rank high in the worthless category somewhere above Astro Turf but still somewhat below "The Wave."

If the issue is grip, the batter should use one of nature's products such as pine tar or spit. A batter could also be really innovative and put tape on the bat. This seems to work better for wood than aluminum. At the very least he should use a product from one of MSBL's sponsors, "Gorilla Gold."

If the issue is keeping your hands from stinging, try hitting the ball on the bat's sweet spot. That's my personal favorite, but one I'm having trouble mastering. Maybe those stinging hands are God's way of saying, "Keep your hands back and hit the ball on the sweet spot."

If the issue is keeping your hands warm, blowing on them between pitches should help. If that does not work, you probably shouldn't be playing outside.

Anaconda Sports (another shameless sponsor plug) wastes one entire page on batting gloves. But upon further review we find further proof of the absurdity. Franklin features the "Carbon Fiber Digital Pro." Nice name but it gets better. Check this ad copy, "Cabretta sheepskin finger backing and neo-fit knuckle bridge system." I have taught ad copy. I don't think "neo-fit knuckle bridge system" would receive a passing grade. I'd accuse my student of making it up.

Rawlings top-of-the-line glove is the "Workhorse." That glove outdoes the Franklin in the sheepskin department—"Pittards sheepskin leather." The Rawlings also promises a "Dynamic Fit System." That feature sounds more suitable for an astronaut than a cleanup hitter.

The Easton glove tauts a "ergonomic lycra knuckle section." The Mizunos feature "treated Altither leather" or "Bio-Lock fitting system." I want Mizuno to tell me why you can't get both Altither leather and a Bio-Lock fitting system I the same glove. You shouldn't have to buy two pairs. (continued on page 5)

Pitcher Neal Lerner of the Louisiana Storm knew he was going to get a lot of innings in when he signed on, but he had no idea they would all be in one day. On Wednesday, Lerner pitched back to back complete game wins to give his team a shot at making the playoffs. The Storm had a record of 0-3 going into yesterday's doubleheader, but by the end of the day they were 2 - 3, thanks to

The Storm defeated the Griswold Diamondbacks, 14-1, and the Lehigh Valley Giants, 6-2. Lerner struck out 12, walked one batter and gave up just one earned run in 18 innings.

Diary of An Aging Ball Player

But my personal favorite is the 1/8 page box add for the "TurboSlot (not batting, they crossed it out) Hitting Gloves. Catch a load of this copy. "TurboSlot is HITTING GLOVE that IN-STANTLY makes the wearer stronger, creating more bat speed and power. This allows the batter (didn't they mean hitter?) to IMMEDIATELY hit the ball farther and harder." And here I thought those MLB sluggers were just pumping iron and downing steroids. They were actually wearing TurboSlot Gloves.

But the ad copy gets better. Under the "Here's How It Works" heading, the copywriter explains the concept. The Turbo Slot pads act as a wedge that creates leverage. The leverage in turn creates resistance. Resistance creates power. And the coup de grace "Power=Distance." If I hadn't slept through that 4th hour physics class, I might actually be able to understand this. But at $25.95 per pair I'm not about to test their theory.

Cell Phones—Has modern man ever invented a gadget that can save us immeasurable amounts of time and money while at the same time driving our friends and co-workers absolutely nutty? The cell phone is that invention. And they have found their way into the dugouts of MSBL-land. One of the oft-repeated scenes comes when the Nokia "Take Me Out To the Ball Game" ring tone sets off, and eight guys dive into their bat bags to grab their phones. I also have eyewitness proof of a 1st base coach talking on a cell phone. At least it wasn't the 3rd base coach.

But my favorite cell phone stories come when I eavesdrop on the conversations of our team veterinarian. That's not completely. He's on our team, and he's a veterinarian. Remember that old Bob Newhart schtick when he would have an imaginary phone conversation with someone? You'd only hear half of the conversation, and you'd have to imagine the other half. That's just the way it is with Dr. Dan Hecker, the DVM of Cell Phones. Space does not permit a recounting of the exact conversation, but trust me, the 10-minute exchange with an employee concerning the dog that escaped from the office was true Farrelly Brothers comedy.

Just last night at a team gathering, Dr. Dan, the Dogman's, phone rang. Earlier in the evening he had told us a story about a dog in his clinic who had passed on to his reward. As we teased him about this latest phone interruption, he removed the phone from his ear and announced, "Someone stole the dog from the freezer." As a journalist I've learned sometimes it's best not to ask a follow-up question.

(When he is not playing baseball, Dr. Max Utsler teaches journalism at the University of Kansas).
