Diary of an Aging Baseball PlayerA Cure for your Baseball Ills?

By Max Utsler

A few weeks ago I was about ready to change my e-mail address. Overnight my "in box" was getting more action than the Sigma Nu's at Lake Havasu on Spring Break. Unlike the Sigma Nu's, it was the wrong kind of action.

Junk mail.

I think this all started last March when I went to www.cbssportsline.com and entered the "Win a Million Dollars in the March Madness Sweepstakes." I follow college basketball religiously--and the entry was free. So armed with that extensive knowledge of "bracketology," I charged into the competition—and promptly finished 897,267th place out of two million entrants. But that also triggered a deluge of junk mail that has been the e-mail equivalent of Mt. St. Helens.

But I haven't spent the last 35-plus years hanging around college for nothing. I decided to take advantage of this generous outpouring of e-mail support and share some with you. In keeping with the spirit of World Series Week in Phoenix, I have annotated the e-mail to show how you and I could perhaps expand our baseball skills by applying to these offers.

WARNING: Responding to any of these e-mails will likely trigger another avalanche of similar offers.

Item: Max, It's not a diet, it's a Patch.

Response: If I really thought 20 fewer pounds would result in 20 more points on my batting average, I would have shed them a long time ago.

Item: Don't live with this depression. Try this.

Response: They never really said what the solution would be, but they did leave a 900 number to call. I guess I never realized 10 minutes on the phone with Tempest Vavoom would put me in a better frame of mind to try to hit a slider.

Item: Interested in Family History

Response: I have checked the Encyclopedia of Baseball. No Utsler's have ever played. Matter of fact very few "U's" have ever made it to the bigs.

Item: Earn Your Degree Online

Academic Qualifications available from prestigious NON-Accredited universities. Do you have the knowledge and the experience but lack the qualifications? Are you getting turned down time and time again for the job promotion just because you are lacking a college degree? Move ahead in the world of Business and Employment today! Bachelors, Masters and PhD's available in your field! No examinations! No courses! No textbooks! Call to register and receive your educational credentials within days! 24 hours a day 7 days a week! Confidentiality assured! Get the prestige that you deserve today!

Response: And to think I spent all of that money on tuition (not to mention beer) to get my degrees. NO exams, courses, or textbooks? My students would love that. Matter of fact I would love that. I can see why they guarantee confidentiality.

Item: Do It Right There on Your Kitchen Stove

Response: You are getting ahead of me. This was an ad for a grill and griddle. Of course I had to open it to find out.

Item: Max, How Your Back and Joints Can Feel Better

Response: I am nearly 56 years old. My back and joints can't possibly feel any better.

Item: Depression, Bi-Polar Mood Swings—We can help.

Response: This came from "Panda Bear Perks." Need I say more?

Item: Max, Get Seven Complimentary Pairs of Pants

Response: I didn't know Frederick's of Hollywood made baseball pants. Oh, oh! I think I misread that—it said pairs of panties. I thought I was getting this e-mail from Anaconda Sports.
