26 Players Have Attended All Twenty MSBL World Series Tournaments

By Tom Prendergast

Thirty-eight teams participated in the first MSBL World Series in 1988. Out of that number, twenty-six (26) players have attended every MSBL World Series since that time. So what are the odds of a player participating in all twenty years, pretty slim. Consider that during that time roughly 70,000 players have attended. Here's a list of those players.

65+ Wood Bat Teams Begin Play — Bill Corzie, Jr Traded To AZ Diamondbacks

By Tom Prendergast

With the possibility of snow flurries tonight in Boston for the MLB WS, temperatures in the high 80's continue to rule the day at the MSBL World Series. Today is the final day of pool play for the 35+ and 45+ Wood Bat divisions. Several teams are still alive in the hunt for the final playoff spot in all divisions. In past years the runs allowed category has been crucial in determining which teams advance to the playoffs.

In a World Series first, a player was traded before the tournament began to another team for future considerations. Because of the wild fires in Southern California, several players have had to alter their World Series plans. So in a great gesture of really good sportsmanship, the New England Red Sox traded catcher Bill Curzie, Jr to the Arizona Diamondbacks, to replace their guy who couldn't attend. With acts like this, it's no wonder why these guys have been called "our greatest generation". This division is setting a wonderful example for the rest!
