MSBL / MABL World Series Spotlight on

Scott Zavelo (50+ KC Knights)

One of the original members of the Kansas City MSBL, Scott is the father of two and grandfather of two more, and his wife (Kimberly) of 31 years knows that his days and nights on MSBL ball fields keep him young at heart while competing in a kids' game. When he first began making the fall trip to Arizona, the kids couldn't wait to get out of school and enjoy sunshine and swimming pools. Over the years, college, marriages and grandchildren have changed that a bit, but the whole family still wants to know how each game came out and keep up with dad's passion for baseball. This was most evident when Scott shared the diamond with his son in the Father & Son Division four years ago. Hearing his teammates yelling and screaming in praise of his son after making a game saving spectacular play in the outfield will last forever in his memory. And Scott was in the dugout as a teammate...not in the stands as a fan. When you put all the years events together and consider the desire to win a championship, play on the same team with the son you coached as a kid, family trips to the desert, misadventures with your teammates, and continuing to compete against guys your age in a kid's game....you've got to admit, it's baseball. It's all good.

Protest Denied! Winning Team Petitions For 9-0 Forfeit Win After Win World Series Participation Rules Enforced In The Central and Cactus Divisions

By Commissioner Gordon

When I was a kid, one of my favorite after school shows was the original Batman series. In addition to a great outfit, he had a fantastic car and a utility belt with a lot of neat stuff on it. And he needed it to combat the various villains he encountered each week. One of the most clever and trickiest was the Riddler. This particular villain was notorious for asking tough questions, posed as riddles. In many ways he's a lot like some of our World Series managers who continue to ask umpires questions they already know the answer to. For example; what's the minimum number of batters we have to use? Well the obvious answer is 10, unless your team only has 9 players in uniform. But if your team is playing in a participation division then the answer is more like, 14. But wait, it's a bit more complicated than that. Our Central and Cactus divisions require a minimum of one plate appearance per game (continued on page 2)

Holy Cow Batman - You Mean We Have to Bat 14?

(continued from page 1) for at least 14 dressed players. It's up to the manager to juggle his 10 man offensive lineup and during a 9 inning ballgame, get 14 players a plate appearance. If that doesn't happen then if that team wins, they end up losing. I've had several managers tell me how unfair and unforgiving this rule is, and my answer to them is a question; why did you sign your team up to play in this division? And just like the Riddler, our managers are clever. If a team wins a game 9-8, and the other team fails to get all 14 players into the game, it's more advantageous to take a 9-0 forfeit win to keep the runs allowed down. Only one problem with that, we don't allow winning teams to protest games! Same bat time - same bat channel!
