MSBL Director Of Communications Update On Remote Reports COVID-19 Creating Havoc With Hardball Online Staff Members This Year!

By Steve LaMontia

To say that the 2020 MSBL World Series is experiencing unprecedented procedures and norms is obvious to us all, whether as a participant or an observer from elsewhere throughout the MSBL nation. My reason for reaching out to you is to briefly explain how my annual involvement in the festivities in the Valley of the Sun have also been impacted.

Part of my duties as MSBL's Communications Director is to assign our veteran staff of reporters to cover our championship games at the World Series in Arizona. This year is quite different. It was decided that to keep our staffing to a minimum and to ensure everyone's safety we would not involve our reporters in live game coverage this year. I am, in fact, communicating with you from my desk in Colorado. The reporter's duties normally include not only game scorekeeping and potential involvement with players and fans before and after the games, but also as photographers and interviewers throughout and after the event. That is exposure we chose not to promote for the safety of our staff and our players.

Where am I going with this? I ensure you that I will personally be contacting all of our winning managers after the tournament and obtaining a game story and photographs from them so that I can compile a feature for the important permanent inclusion on our World Series page of the MSBL website for years to come. You won't be seeing these comprehensive stories within days of the completed game, but you will see them posted in the weeks ahead. As is my practice, I will also post each game story on our Facebook and Twitter pages as they are written so you won't have to look far to relive the memories.

With 202 teams participating in this year's event we are thrilled to be able to keep the streak alive and thank everyone for their involvement and passion and look forward to 2021 being bigger and better than ever. Be safe, everyone!
