MSBL Pool Play Format For Success - Keep Runs Allowed Low!

WS Tie Breaker Formula Isn't Complicated - But It Is Unforgiving and Frustrating
By Tom Prendergast

Another trip down the MSBL WS 35 year memory lane brings us to our current formula for tie breakers. During our first couple of years, if two or more teams were tied for the final playoff spot in a division, they would play a 3 inning game. This was incredibly exciting and exhilarating but these games usually ended up going 4 or 5 innings, which would push our championship game back an hour or more. This created a problem on teams where some of their players had late afternoon flights home. So to solve this we came up with the current tie breaking system of fewest runs allowed. Here's how it works. Head to head is always the first category (except in wildcard situations). If 3 teams are 4-2 and they all beat each other, then we use fewest runs allowed to determine the seeding. However, if one team beat the other two then that team gets the top spot. Or if the teams didn't all play each other, then we use fewest runs allowed. And of course, when it comes to wildcard spots, its always fewest runs allowed

Note - Crossover Games against National teams in the pool play round update.

During games in which an out of division team is scheduled to play a national team, they only have to bat 10 players.
