Game On Website Outage Keeps The WS Office Phones Ringing Off The Hook Frantic World Series Staffers Manually Compiled the 35+ Playoffs By Hand

By Tom Prendergast

Long before former Vice President, Al Gore invented the internet, all of the WS game scores and standings were tallied by hand on legal sheets of yellow paper. We had standings boards in the novelty shop and updated them every hour, on the hour. That was a long time ago and only a few of us were around back in those days. Fortunately now days, everything is done through our computers and instantly accessible on the website - except when it isn't! Last night was a "Back to the Future" moment for the staff. Unable to access our Game On app either through our iPhone or computers, we went back to doing things the old fashioned way. And as we usually do, we called several teams that were on the bubble, just to make sure we had their correct runs allowed. For a tense 2 hours, the staff went through every teams scores and counted up both runs allowed and scored. Thankfully most of the managers were pretty understanding and patient. Right around midnight the Game On App started working - again!
